All of these questions, and more, are central to the corruption-climate link. Sizing Up Corruption. Understanding the scale of corruption can be challenging. The U.N. estimates that the cost of corruption sits at about 5% of global annual GDP, or at least $2.6 trillion. In other words, if corruption were its own, individualized economy, it would rank behind France as the world's eighth largest financial engine. The essence of this tragedy, however, lies beyond the numbers and in the ...
